About Marie

Marie Mejerwall is a long-time veteran of game design. She has led creative teams at more than six game studios around the world and has worked on several famous award-winning franchises, such as Dead Rising, Deus Ex, RollerCoaster Tycoon and the Batman Arkham series. She started out in programming, transitioned to game design, rose to become a Lead and eventually Game Director over her own game, both building a team, the creative vision and establishing creative processes.

Having worked at many studios and led many creative teams across the globe, Marie has been in or seen most of the situations that creative leaders face in the games industry. She understands the dynamics that happen at studios at times and ways in which many of them can be solved. She also has a long history of coaching both those who report to her and the many who has looked up to her and sought her council over the years.

Read on to learn how Marie can help you in your role and career as a creative leader.

Director Support

Facing many hard expectations at once?

Too many features, too many stakeholders, too much pressure, not enough time?

Got some tough feedback that you want a neutral opinion on and/or just help to work on?

Afraid people won't/don't believe in the creative vision?

The team is underperforming, demotivated or straight up leaving?

Scope is too big, but how do you take the conversation and/or proceed?

Have a hard time earning the trust of your boss, board, peers or team?

Overview

No matter the situation, Marie is here for you. She provides advice and suggestions for any situation that arises. Her goal is always on you as an individual and how she can help with the things you need in the situations that you face. It's to help you perform in your role, and your team in theirs.

By coming in as an external part, Marie has a neutral perspective and can easier deconstruct situations. Drawing from her experience from similar situations, she can almost always help guide the best way forward.

How it works

Director support is a series of consultation sessions, usually video calls, but more asynchronous models also exist such as text or recorded video/voice.

In Director support, YOU set the agenda on what each session contains. It could be to just unpack what is happening at the moment in your work life, or to follow-up on a plan or goals that we together lay out. The discussion itself could revolve either around you, someone working close to you or simply your whole team.

The support also goes on for as long as you wish, and can take breaks as needed. Needless to say, NDA:s can be signed and everything said is confidential unless there is an explicit ask and permission to share.
